Paterson, N. J., Aug. 12.—David Young, president of the Board of Aldermen, has assumed the duties of Mayor of Paterson. The law provides that if the Mayor is absent ten consecutive days his place shall be filled by the president of the Aldermanic Board, and the time of grace having clapsed Mr. Young is now acting Mayor. Besides performing the duties of Mayor. Mr. Young will retain the office of President of the Board of Aldermen and will receive no additional compensation as Mayor. He did not take the oath of office, since such action is not required by the charter.

since such action is not required by the charter.

Application has been made to throw William H. Belcher into bankruptcy by Frederick Beggs, as counsel for Edward M. Kreck of Wortendkye. In the petition accompanying the application it is alleged that Belcher is an absconding debtor, and that his whereabouts is unknown. Daniel Campbell, who was appointed by the court as receiver, was required to furnish only a $5.000 bond. From that it is judged that Belcher's assets are less than $2.500 it is alleged in the petition that Belcher had about $1.000 in cash when he went away.

It is alleged in the petition that Beicher had about $1.000 in cash when he went away.

The temporary receiver for Beicher's estate will hold the estate intact until bankruptcy is declared and a permanent receiver appointed. The order granted by Judge Lanning will restrain all attachments that have been sued out against the property of the fugitive. Receiver Campbell will make an inventory, and it is expected that the property will be divided in an equitable manner among the creditors. As temporary receiver Mr. Campbell will be required to see to it that the work of gathering the crops on the Beicher farms is properly done.

A postal card received here this morning from Stockton, Cal., seems to bear out the theory that William H. Beicher started for Callifornia when he left this city two weeks ago. The postal was addressed to Harry Gold of Straight street, and was signed 'Billy D."

William Decker, the probable writer, is a cigar mlesman for a New Kork firm and has been in the city so often that he knows every public man in the city. After devoting a part of the card to business matters, the writer went on to say that he had seen the Mayor there and that Beicher had his mustache shaved off. The postal bore the postmans "Stockton, Cal."

It was at first supposed that the postal was a hear, but now that the authorities have looked into the matter they think there must be something in it. The Mayor would have just about time to reach Stockton, and Decker would have bad time to see him and have his postal reach this city. Beicher has a brother in California.

FROM OLD TO NEW CITY HOSPITAL IS WONDERFUL STUDY IN CONTRAST

Gloomy Old Structure on Seventeenth and Pine Streets at Last Deserted for the Modern Group of Buildings at Lafavette and Grattan Street-Removal of 360 Patients Carried Out Last Week Without a Single Hitch or Accident-New Edifice Most Convenient.

It was as far removed from being an ideal place, even for a make employes of the there is a space of pital. It was not five for a make shift, as could be chosen, but it was the best that could be done.

For eight years past, while the magnificent new hospital has been building, patients and their ministering physicians and nurses have struggled against enormous odds in the squalled and rickety old building. It was not fireproof, germproof, noiseproof or water-proof. It possessed no elevators, only a minimum of the sundight which the sick and injured should have in maximum quantities, and was destitute of all the conveniences and advantages of appliances and location that a hospital, above all, should possess.

But, nevertheless it was with a feeling of solemn apprehension that the superintendent of the hospital. Booter John Young Brown, contemplated the day when the order would come to remove the patients and the property of the city from the old to the new institution.

Any physician with the great responsibility weighing upon him, that is at all times that of the Superintendent of a city hospital, will resultly appreciate the nature of the apprehension felt by Doctor Erown.

To remove from a building unprovided with elevators nearly 60 patients of vaving degrees of helplesmess to another building many blocks distant, is no slight task. Those physicians, nurses and attendants who have but lately gone through the experience will state the case less negatively. They will aver that it is a problem.

Nevertheless, it was done, and done without a hitch. The only miscalculation made in planning for the task was that it was done in less time than was provided for it. But-no one grumbled at that.

Beginning at 8 o'clock in the morning, two-thirds of the 30 patients in the old City Hospital had been safely removed to the new edifices, and comfortably enconced in their respective waria. Before nightfall, all of them, even to the most desperate case, was under the reof of the new building, resting as easily as though the experience were a part of the daily regimen of hospital life.

"Tis a grand place, to be sure; but "tis not like home," said one of the veteran patients of the City Hospital on that institution's moving day, last Thursday, as he surveyed the splendid group at Carroll and Grattan streets, which constitute the new City Hospital.

At that, the veteran spoke with no regret on leaving the ramshackte old makeshift that for the last eight years has served as the public hospital. He merely irdulged the inveterate penchant of an Irishman under any and all circumstances to "have his joke."

shift that for the last eight years has served as the public hospital. He merely induged the irevierate penchant of an Irishman under any and all circumstances to "have his joke."

In fact, there was not one of all the number of patients, physicians, nurses and attendants who moved and had their being in the old and tumbledown building who devoted a shadow of regret at leaving the old structure.

The abandonment of the old building was unique at least in this respect. To almost any structure which has served a faint shadow of regret when its uses are over, be the regret ever so little or ever so mawkishly sentimental; but the old City Hospital was so inadequate, so unfitted to its uses so dark and dingy and generally unwholesome a place, that its abandonment was a signal for general rejoicing on the part of those who knew it best.

There was reason why the patients should rejoice; there was as good a reason why physicians and nurses and attendants should rejoice.

Square pegs in round holes have been proverbailly bad fits. The establishment of a metropolitan city hospital in the abandoned structure at Seventeenth and Pine streets was quite as bed a fit, though there was no help for it. Unhoused by the Cyclone of 186, which well-nigh demolished the City Hospital, then on the site of the row group of hoswital buildings, the patients, dependent on charity of the city for a show for life and health, had to be accommodated somewhere. tan and Carroll streets is isolated from the other structures, which are connected by a corridor two stories high. In every room—in fact, in every nook and corner of the wast institution—is an abundance of daylight, and the lurking germ is sought out and exterminated ruthlessiy by the natural elements which are inimical to its existence.

The division classification of the entire group of buildings makes of the isolated structure the Administration building, wherein are also the offices of the hospital, the quarrers of the physicians and male employes of the institution.

Between this building and the next of the group east of it there is a space of about 100 feet.

The two buildings binnediately east of the Administration structure are twin edifices, about 20 feet apart, but connected by a covered corridor, the roof of which is a balcony, also connecting the two buildings at the third story.

The first of the twin buildings is known as Division B, West Octagonal building. Both are five stories in height and have wards on each floor.

For the convalencents who were able to walk or be about on crutches three arrest cars were provided and, on the several trip made by these cars, a nurse and a physician accompanied each. All of this seems simple enough in the telling. But it is only so because the whole system of removal had been carefully and laboriously planned weeks ahead of the date and every man and woman who took part in the moving carefully drilled in his or her individual part. So, when the day came, every member of the hospital staff was present and at his or her appointed post.

The attendant physicians arose at 5.
